H.M.H.S.P.M.C. Chymia Curiosa Variis, non solum ex Regno Vegetabili, sed etiam ex Minerali et Animali, Experimentis adornata. Seneca Epist. 123. Tenenda nobis via est, quam natura praescipit, nec ab illa declinandum. Illam sequentibus omnia facilia, & expedita sunt : contra illam nitentibus non alia vita est, quam contra aquam remigantibus. Londini, Impensis Henrici Gellords, et Christiani Wallich, Anno 1687.

8vo. Pp. (4), 16, (12).

I have not been able to trace this booklet in any of the usual bibliographies.

Sheet A (8 leaves) is numbered 1-16, sheet B (6 leaves) has no heading or pagination and the catchword does not tally between A₈ and B₁. It seems however that the book is complete.

Bound up with 3 other tracts in 1 vol. See : HELMONT (F. M. van), Quaedam , 1697, q.v.

H. (A.C.V.).

Ars Chimica Naturae Aemula. Das ist, Die auss der Edlen Chimie hervor-blickende wundersame Natur. Entworffen von A. C. V. H. Nebst einem Anhang etlicher curieusen und nützlichen Experimenten. Gedruckt im Jahr 1684.

8vo. Pp. (48). Woodcut vignette on title.

This tract is not quoted in any of the usual bibliographies and is rare.

The anonymous author relates in it the story of his life. He was born in Germany, travelled in Italy, and afterwards returned to his fatherland where he was occupied at the court of some prince for a certain time. He gives accounts of several fraudulent transmutations and finishes by a collection of secrets.

Bolton I, 506.

An interesting work describing an original method of making tinctures and extracts. The first chapter deals with Papin's digester and the book ends with a description and illustration of the author's apparatus. The preface mentions how much the author owed to the Comte de Garaye's work. A nice copy from the library of de Saussure with his bookstamp on flyleaf.

HAGEN (Karl Gottfried).
